First Announcement and Call for Contributions to an^{AFLS} Workshop on Staff Development, to be held at the Modern Languages Teaching Centre
University of Sheffield
Saturday 16 March 1996

- new technologies
- constantly evolving methodology
- graduate tutorships
- ever larger class sizes
- increasing casualisation
- TQA

combine to make staff development a key issue in university language teaching today.

If you would like to pass on your experience of staff development to other ^{AFLS} members, please contact Tim Lewis, who is organising a workshop on the topic. Two kinds of contributions are sought:

- 1 Reports on successful staff development experiences (length approx. 20 mins).
- 2 Activities for staff development (up to 40 minutes, at least half of which should be devoted to participative activity).

Please send outline proposals — (150 words max.) — by Friday December 15th 1995 to:

This will be followed by a Peak District WALKSHOP (optional!) organised by Annie Rouxville, which will take place on Sunday 17 March. Overnight accommodation in halls of residence will be arranged for those who require it.

The Year Abroad: Research Issues on the topic of students going abroad during their Degree Scheme
Lancaster University, 9-11 January 1996

The fifth annual Seminar, held under the auspices of the Centre for Research in Language Education, Lancaster University, with Dr Keith Johnson as Academic Co-ordinator. The seminar is intended for researchers and students registered for MAS or doctorates around the country and abroad, but it is also open to anyone interested in the topic. It will consist of a mixture of formal talks, discussions, and workshops. Participants are encouraged to contribute to Poster Sessions, and time will be made available for discussion.

DO YOU READ GERMAN?

German publishers continue to fill my in-tray with very interesting books about French for review in JFLS, but about half of them are written in German. If you read German and are prepared to do book reviews, please let me know as soon as possible

• by writing to me: c/o Language Institute, University of Hull, HULL HU6 7RX, UK
• sending me a fax: +44 (0) 14 82 46 59 91

• or an email message:

g.e.buscher@langc.hull.ac.uk.

Many thanks in advance.
