

BOOK SALE

The following volumes, published by the Association for French Language Studies in association with the Centre for Information on Language Teaching and Research (CILT), are now available at the special price of £5.00 per volume (including postage and packing).

To order please contact Marie-Anne Hintze, French Department, University of Leeds, Leeds LS2 9JT (e-mail: M.M.J.Hintze@leeds.ac.uk). Cheques should be made payable to: Association for French Language Studies.

These thematic volumes in the series Current Issues in University Language Teaching, are intended to bring together work founded on recent research, by both UK and international scholars, designed to encourage informed debate on aspects of language teaching and learning. The volumes available are described below, with comments from published reviews.

Integrating New Approaches: The Teaching of French in Higher Education

Edited by James A. Coleman & Annie Rouxeville. 1993. ISBN 1 874016 09 7. After an introduction describing the real state of university language teaching and the pressures the profession faces, Integrating New Approaches evaluates both traditional and innovative approaches and concepts, including information technology, authentic texts, learner autonomy, literature and the year abroad. Contributions are not specific to French, and look at the whole languages degree programme in the current context of quality, cost-effective provision.

‘This powerful work ... is one of the first authoritative collections to examine what new ideas and techniques exist and how they can be used to expand and enrich language teaching.’ ‘The collection elicits admiration for the ingenuity, creativity and optimism of the recounted efforts to situate language learning in contexts as diverse as overall syllabus design, hypermedia, cultural competence, learner autonomy, horizontal integration, and – one of the most original – an ethnographic approach to the year abroad.’

Discourse Variety in Contemporary French: Descriptive and Pedagogical Approaches

Edited by James A. Coleman & Robert Crawshaw. 1994. ISBN 1 874016 27 5. Twelve chapters address the theoretical, descriptive and pedagogical issues related to the way language varies according to its context of use. Historical and theoretical surveys are followed by analyses of different text types, and practical discussion of the integration of discourse variety into French language teaching programmes.

‘Reflects recent research on the elaboration of a theoretical framework for the definition and study of discourse variety while also exploring pedagogical implications for advanced foreign language learning. The strength of this volume – which is both scholarly and approachable – lies in the constant interplay between theory and practice.’

The following volumes, published by the Association for French Language Studies in association with the Centre for Information on Language Teaching and Research (CILT), are now available at the special price of £5.00 per volume (including postage and packing).

To order please contact Marie-Anne Hintze, French Department, University of Leeds, Leeds LS2 9JT (e-mail: M.M.J.Hintze@leeds.ac.uk). Cheques should be made payable to: Association for French Language Studies.

These thematic volumes in the series Current Issues in University Language Teaching, are intended to bring together work founded on recent research, by both UK and international scholars, designed to encourage informed debate on aspects of language teaching and learning. The volumes available are described below, with comments from published reviews.

Integrating New Approaches: The Teaching of French in Higher Education

Edited by James A. Coleman & Annie Rouxeville. 1993. ISBN 1 874016 09 7.

After an introduction describing the real state of university language teaching and the pressures the profession faces, Integrating New Approaches evaluates both traditional and innovative approaches and concepts, including information technology, authentic texts, learner autonomy, literature and the year abroad. Contributions are not specific to French, and look at the whole languages degree programme in the current context of quality, cost-effective provision.

‘This powerful work ... is one of the first authoritative collections to examine what new ideas and techniques exist and how they can be used to expand and enrich language teaching.’ ‘The collection elicits admiration for the ingenuity, creativity and optimism of the recounted efforts to situate language learning in contexts as diverse as overall syllabus design, hypermedia, cultural competence, learner autonomy, horizontal integration, and – one of the most original – an ethnographic approach to the year abroad.’

Variability in Spoken French: a sociolinguistic study of interrogation and negation* ISBN 1-84150-700-8 £19.99 Paperback, 296pp.

Aidan Coveney

First published in 1996, and now republished by Intellect Ltd, with a new chapter providing a critical survey of the most recent research in the field. Interrogative structures and the omission of ne are two of the most significant areas of variability in the grammar of spoken French. Drawing on a substantial sociolinguistic corpus, this book investigates the social, linguistic and pragmatic factors that lead speakers to make their choices in these two areas. The book has been widely referred to by other researchers, not only in French Sociolinguistics, but also in Second Language Acquisition and Creole Studies.

Intellect, PO Box 862, Bristol BS99 1DE, UK; tel: 44 (0) 117 958 9910; fax: 44 (0) 117 958 9911;

e-mail: orders@intellectbooks.com